Section 5. Terms of Reference

Company to conduct an exploratory study on the informal activity of firms and individuals and informal employment

Duty Station:	Chisinau Moldova
Section/Unit:	Migration and Local Development Project (MiDL)
Starting Date:	22 December, 2020
Type of contract:	Contract for Goods and Services for UNDP
Duration of Assignment:	December 2020 – May 2021

I. BACKGROUND

The National Development Strategy Moldova 2030 identified improving working condition and reducing informal employment as one of the top ten government priorities in the long-term. Therefore, this will be further cascading down into sectoral strategies, such as the strategy for inclusive and sustainable economic development, which the Ministry of Economy and Infrastructure is in the process of developing. Nevertheless, the phenomena of informal economic activity and informal employment in the context of the Republic of Moldova is not sufficiently studied, leading to considerable difficulties in designing and implementing adequate policy response.

Informal economy in Moldova is widespread, estimated at 28% of GDP in 2018, registering an increase from 22.4% in 2016³. This phenomenon is mostly concentrated in several sectors: the largest share of informal economy in the gross value-added contribution to the GDP is attributed to agriculture (62%), commerce (40.7%), construction (30.2%), and HoReCa (25%)⁴. High shares of informal economy inevitably lead to corresponding shares of informal employment. In 2018, the NBS has estimated informal employment at 38.5% of the total employment, with an increase in the proportion of informal employment from around 30% in 2008-2013 reversing the progress back to the levels of 2000. While some sectors, such as manufacturing, HoReCa, and transportation have witnessed a decrease in informality, the statistics is mostly dominated by agriculture and to a lesser extent, by construction, where the estimated informal employment reaches 85.3% and 62.5%, respectively. At the same time, the structure of the labour market shows that salaried employees represent only 62.1% of the employed, while around 1/3 of the employed count as self-employed workers. Even more so, the proportion of self-employed workers has been growing constantly from 28.3% in 2013 to 33.6% in 2018, with a corresponding decrease in the salaried employees category, which indicates an increase in the informal employment and subsistence agriculture as a result of the economic challenges faced by the country⁵. Generally, out of six categories of informal workers identified by the NBS, the largest share of informal employees is represented by self-employed workers (almost 40%).

In the context of the COVID-19 pandemic, fueled by increase in returning migrants, inability to migrate for work, and freeze of formal jobs, informal employment is expected to rise even more. In the context of decreased demand, very low liquidity to cover the financial obligations, and no support measures from the central public authorities, it is expected that more formal businesses will chose to enter the grey zone in the upcoming months by not registering some transactions and offer undeclared direct cash payments to employees as a survival strategy.

In this context, UNDP Moldova, through its Migration and Local Development Project, is seeking to enrich and update the existing knowledge base related to the phenomena of informal activity and informal employment by conducting an extensive research aimed at analysing the policy and legislative frameworks, identifying gaps that hinder the transition into formality, as well as engage with firms and individuals to better understand the drivers of their behaviour. The research study is expected to provide knowledge and entry points for further interventions to support the transition into formality of firms and individuals.

II. SCOPE OF WORK

UNDP Moldova is seeking a company or a consortium of companies to conduct a comprehensive exploratory study on the informal economic activity of firms and individuals and informal employment in the Republic of Moldova.

The objectives of the study are the following:

1. Assess the legal, fiscal, and policy frameworks with respect to existing types of labour relations, identify gaps and incongruencies, as well as incentives and disincentives which are conducive to various forms of informal activity and informal employment. Understand how existing policies and legal framework discourage or enhance the transition to formality;
2. Gain insights into the behavioural dimensions of the phenomena, from the perspective of firms, employees, and own-account workers. Identify the main motivations that constrain citizens to transit from informal to partially or fully formal employment, and vice-versa. Create a dynamic model to characterize informal employment. Develop profiles of individuals that normally engage in informal employment;
3. Explore existing datasets, such as the Labour Force Survey, and the Household Budget Surveys, for the identification of new information that would enhance the understanding of firms' informal activity and informal employment;
4. Describe good, evidence-based practices from East-European countries in addressing informal activity and informal employment;
5. Provide policy recommendations and programmatic entry points for facilitating the transitioning into formality;

III. TASKS AND ESTIMATED WORKLOAD

The assignment will require the completion of the following tasks:

1. Propose a methodology to be applied for the objectives of the study;

⁵ Spatari, M. & Guga, S. (2019). Situatia salariatilor din Republic Moldova: O Criza Structurala.

2. Conduct a short overview of the policy framework related to informal economy and informal employment. Review the operational and regulatory documents related to informal activity and informal employment, and assess the adequacy, as well as the actual application and enforcement of these. Identify the gaps within the regulatory framework that are conducive to informality. In particular, assess the fiscal regime for different types of labour and service provision relations, together with the incentives and disincentives to transition to formality (up to 7 pages);
3. Conduct a representative survey among employees and employers, in order to understand the size and the nature of the phenomena, and profile the characteristics of the informal economy actors. Analyse the micro level determinants of informality (push and pull factors) and incentives for formalization such as, but not limited to, the level of education, gender, vulnerability, income level, access to credit, to services or to markets. Profile the informal economy workers and economic units considering also the gender and urban/rural perspective. Conduct qualitative research (focus groups and in-depth interviews) focused at understanding the causes, incentives and deterrents of workers and firms related to informal activity;
4. Measure and characterize the informal activity and informal employment in the country, including distribution in terms of status in employment, sector of employment, etc. Identify type of enterprises, regions, sectors/occupations or groups of workers facing a particular challenge, where informality prevails and the corresponding forms of informality;
5. Explore the existing sources of data such as, but not limited to, the Labour Force Survey, the Household Budget Survey, to identify additional information that would contribute to a better understanding of firms' informal activity and informal employment;
6. Facilitate a dialogue among stakeholders on the findings of the study;
7. Provide recommendations on how the findings can be translated into evidence-based policies and development interventions to address the situation of informal activity and informal employment (up to 5 pages);
